DRUG POISONING RESOURCES

Drug poisonings can happen in all neighbourhoods

You or someone you know needs a naloxone kit.

You see someone who may be experiencing a drug poisoning (overdose).

Look for signs of an opioid poisoning

- Slow or no breathing
- Gurgling or snoring sounds
- Can't wake them up
- Pale face, blue lips or nails
- Cold and damp skin
- Choking or throwing up

911

Emergency Services

Take action. Use a naloxone kit if it is safe to do so. If possible, place the person in the recovery position and stay with them until help arrives.

albertahealthservices.ca/info/page15586.aspx

Free at any pharmacy in Alberta and many other community locations. Visit the Alberta Health Services website to find a location nearest you.

DRUG POISONING RESOURCES

Using drugs alone?

Given the increased toxicity of the drug supply, using alone is especially dangerous.

- Use with others and take turns
- Let someone you trust know your plan to use
- Start low and go slow
- Avoid mixing drugs
- Carry a naloxone kit
